Consequences of untreated hearing loss

- irritability, negativism and anger
- fatigue, tension, stress and depression
- avoidance or withdrawal from social situations
- social rejection and loneliness
- reduced alertness and increased risk to personal safety
- impaired memory and ability to learn new tasks
- reduced job performance and earning power
- diminished psychological and overall health

And the big one...

“Seniors with hearing loss are significantly more likely to develop dementia over time than those who retain their hearing”

“Older adults with hearing loss are at greater risk of dementia than those with normal hearing. These findings are consistent with the rationale that correction of hearing loss could help delay the onset of dementia.”

- Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, Volume65, Issue9 September 2017

Hear In America's Mission

To get our group members hearing as well as they possibly can, with the best values for their hearing aid purchases.

Although we don't have solid research yet that hearing aids prevent dementia, we DO know that hearing aids can reverse all of the other effects. If your brain can understand speech more easily then you have more energy left for other things.
